Attend Faculty Professional Development at the Library

Networking Using Social Media
Thursday, February 12, 2015 10:20 – 11:15 a.m.
Remain professional online. Become a source of information while utilizing and marketing your brand, and communicating within the “hidden Job Market,” as many employers want to hire people they, or someone they know, knows.

Make Social Media Apps Work for You
Tuesday, February 17, 2015 10:20 – 11:15 a.m.
Explore ways to use apps to schedule social media posts and help you interact with your network. Learn to reach a larger network.

In-depth with ProQuest
Wednesday, February 25, 2015 10 a.m. – 12 p.m.
ProQuest consultant and librarian Linda Cubias explores the features and functionality of the PROQUEST interface, with concentration on databases Black Studies Center, Historical Newspapers and Newsstand.

Please RSVP: robinsonl@cookman.edu; 386-481-2416

Dr. Carter Godwin Woodson
is known as the “Father of Black History.” The author, editor, publisher and historian, who believed Black people should know their history in order to become productive citizens, lived December 1875 through April 1950.

Woodson was born in Virginia to former slaves who could not read or write. Although he enjoyed learning, he worked as a miner to make a living. At the age of 20, Woodson entered Douglass High School in Huntington, West Virginia and obtained his diploma two years later. He became a teacher and returned to Douglass High School as principal. As he continued his education, he obtained a Bachelor of Literature from Berea College in Kentucky. Woodson studied abroad before obtaining his M.A. from University of Chicago and his Ph.D. in history from Harvard University in 1912.

Woodson later became one of the founders of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History (ASNLH). In 1926 he then developed Negro History Week during the second week in February. In 1976 the Week, then, expanded to become Black History Month in the US.
